Binoculars, how do they work?

Present day binoculars usually work with prisms and lenses. Of course the quality of the lenses is particularly important, but what about the numbers? Here a concise explanation. If it says 8 x 22 then 8 stands for the magnification and 22 for the diameter of the front lens. The diameter of the front lens also determines the incidence of light.

The larger the lens, the larger the power to catch light thus making the binoculars useful even when there is little light. On some models there is further information like 128m/1000m. Here the 128m indicates the span of the horizon that can be observed through the binoculars in meters, and 1000m is the distance at which you will see it, also in meters.

THE BATTLE

There are 150 million plastic water bottles sold each day. An enormous industry to produce, fill and transport these bottles. Only 25% are recycled. The rest ends up as litter or landfill. Plastic bottle waste is increasing at an alarming rate: it tripled since 1995.

While we don't even need this water: public tap water is just as tasteful and healthy.

Size: ø 5,5 cm.

P417.013

NEW

CO2 pedometer

Pedometer that not only counts your burned calories, but also tells you what your environmental contribution is by walking instead of using your car. This pedometer counts calories burned, distance traveled, target steps and above all the carbon footprint. The carbon footprint is the total amount of greenhouse gasses emitted to directly or indirectly support human activities. Reducing Co2 will help us to protect the Ozone layer. Driving a car means producing Co2 due to the burned fuel of your engine. So when you walk instead of taking your car you will help, step by step, to reduce the Co2 emission.

What is a carbon footprint?

The carbon footprint is the total amount of greenhouse gasses emitted to directly or indirectly support human activities.

Reducing Co2 will help us to protect the Ozone layer. Driving a car means producing Co2 due to the burned fuel of your engine. So when you walk instead of taking your car you will help, step by step, to reduce the Co2 emission.
